You're traveling out of state when a client calls with an emergency task. Unfortunately, the files you need are saved on your desktop computer back at the office. Sure, if you use a cloud storage service such as Dropbox or Box.net, you'll be able to access those files remotely and help your client. But some people don't trust the cloud with their valuable business information. For them, iTwin might be a good alternative.

iTwin is an easy-to-use USB device made up of two identical halves that plug into two online computers to connect them via the Internet so files between the two can be accessed remotely. iTwin employs two-factor authentication, military-grade 256-bit AES encryption, and a proprietary remote disable feature that can be used if one of the halves is lost or stolen. It supports Microsoft Windows 7, XP, Vista, and later this month will work with Mac OS X version 10.6 and later. iTwin is on sale for $89 at Amazon.com and also available at iTwin.com.
