You know, I am not going to lie. When I heard that Evutec is using Kevlar for their line of smart phone and tablet cases, a part of me wanted to go to a shooting range and see just how good the case is. (I will once I can get a hold of a damaged Samsung Galaxy 3.) I imagine the case

You know, I am not going to lie. When I heard that Evutec is using Kevlar for their line of smart phone and tablet cases, a part of me wanted to go to a shooting range and see just how good the case is. (I will once I can get a hold of a damaged Samsung Galaxy 3.) I imagine the case will be in great condition, but the impact location will...well, I will let your imagination handle that for now.

The Karbon line for the Galaxy S3 does a great job, which you can see our review of the case here. Evutec doesn't only do Kevlar, they also wood cases using Ebony and Bamboo. Now the first thing I asked was, "Wouldn't the wood cause the case to overheat, have problems around water or be weak to impact?" Not at all, the wood cases are infused with kevlar to help avoid those problems, and best all of the cases are strong, flexible and lightweight.

You can find the cases at the Evutec website, and a few are

Apple exclusives which can be found in Apple stores and <http://store.apple.com/us....>
